

1. The solar blaze is the sun-god, Shamash, placed within the crescent of the moon-goddess, or "queen of heaven" (Ur, 2100 B.C.).
2. Assyrian-style relief of King Bar-Raqqah. Note the sun-disc inside of a crescent moon (Syria, 800 B.C.).

3. The Egyptian Apis bull, likely the pattern used for the golden calf the Israelites made at Mount Sinai (Ex. 32). Note the sun disk and horns, identical to Catholic monstrances.

4. Egyptian goddess Isis. Her headdress shows the sun disk within the horns of an Apis bull, identical to that of the Catholic sunburst monstrance.

5. Ornament from King Tut's tomb. Cradled securely in the womb of a crescent moon is a solar disc with the image of the young king.
6. Like a Buddha she sits on top of the crescent moon. St. Stanislaus Kostka Catholic Church in Chicago, IL.
7. Catholic monstrance used to hold the sun-disc wafer-god.
8. The Catholic monstrances use a crescent to mount the wafer-god, thus duplicating the imagery of the solar-disc in a crescent, the ancient symbol of cosmic conception.

ROMAN CATHOLICISM: A CONTINUATION OF ANCIENT PAGAN IDOLATRY, OR THE BIGGEST COINCIDENT IN THE UNIVERSE? YOU DECIDE!

1 Statue of the pagan goddess Ashtoreth (1Kings 11:5.33) also called Ashtaroth (Judges 2:13,10:6, 1Samuel 7:3-4, 12:10) and the queen of heaven (Jeremiah 7:18,44:17,18. Images of her are very common in the archaeological record, indicating the popularity of her cult from the earliest times to the Babylonian exile.

2 Modern Statue of Mary the mother of Jesus. Roman Catholics call Mary "The Queen of Heaven" Jeremiah 7:18,44:17,18.

3 5 Ancient Egyptians Bronze statues of Isis nursing Hours (Egypt, circa 500 B.C.) She was worshiped as the queen mother as well as the patron and friend of sinners, as she listened to their prayers. Isis is often depicted as the mother of Hours, the child sun-god, suckling him in an attitude similar to that of the Virgin Mary with the Child Jesus.
